BROOKLYN COURTS.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

The Navigation Laws of the United States -Important Decisions of Judge Bene-diet - The Astoria Ferry Company Claiming Not to be Subject to the Law of Congress.
The United States vs. The Steamboat Sunswick,

&c.—The following decisions have been rendered by Judge Benedict in actions against the steamat Sunswick, of the Astoria and New York Ferry, tituted by the government for the recovery of enalties incurred through non-compliance with he navigation laws of the United States, the el baving been used upon the ferry mentioned, without previous inspection, under the act of February 28, 1871, without a United States license, the act of February 15, 1793.

The defence rested chiefly upon the ground that, under the provision of the constitution limiting the power of Congress to the regulation of commerce among the several States, vessels engaged in navigating waters within the boundary of a single State were relieved from the statutory requirements of the United States navigation laws.

The Court in this instance holds otherwise. The

This is a proceeding in rem, against the steam-boat Sunswick to enforce against that vessel a lia-bility for $500, under the provisions of the act of Congress entitled "An Act to provide for the better security of life on board of vessels propelled in ns are es follows:-

security of life on board of vessels propelled in whole or in part by steam, and for other purposes," passed February 23, 1871.

The charge is that the boat was engaged in navi-gating public navigable waters of the United States, to wit, the harbor and bay of New York, without having her boiler inspected as required by the eleventh section of the statute above re-ferred to.

The defence is that the boat is not shown to be subject to be inspected under the laws of the United States, but was engaged in the purely internal commerce of the State of New York; that the vessel had failed to comply with the section of the statute referred to is conceded, and it cannot be disputed that the is a vessel within the description given that she is a vessel within the description given by the act of vessels to which the law is declared to be engiciphed. be applicable.

By the express words of the fifty-eighth section of by the act of vessels to which the law is declared to be applicable.

By the express words of the fifty-eighth section of the act its provisions are made applicable to every ferryboat, and by section 41 all steamers "navigating the lakes, bays, inlets, sounds, rivers, harbors or other mavigable waters of the United States, where such waters are common highways of commerce or open to general or competitive navigation" are made subject to the provisions of the act, and, in my opinion she must, upon the evidence, be held subject to the nct, although, notwithstanding its broad language, it be considered inoperative as against a vessel exclusively engaged in purely internal commerce. The evidence shows that at the time complained of the Sunwick was a steam ferryboat, used as one of the ferryboats employed to operate the Astoria ferry, and ran between Astoria, u place on New York Island, carrying passengers and freight. It also appears in evidence that the Astoria ferry is a public ferry, established by law, and a common thoroughfare, open to all, and used for the transporting of all passengers and freight which cross the East River at that point. Judicial notice may be taken of the fact that Astoria is on an island which contains a large population and has numerous and extensive manufactories and large cities within its bounds—that its inhabitants have commercial relations with various States of the Union, and use the ferry boats as the ordinary means of communication between the Jisland and the main land; that upon these boats large of daity business; and that it is principally by means of these ferries that the commerce between long island and other States is carried on. The East River is an arm of the sea and navigable water of the United States, and, by the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of the Daniel Ball (10 Wal. 557), a vessel employed in transporting on such waters goods destined for other States is engaged in commerce among the States, and however limited that commerce may be, she is, so far as i begun to mave as an article of trade from one State to another, or of passengers having a similar destination. But my conclusion is that proof that the vessel was one of the ferryboats engaged on such a ferry as above described, and that while so engaged she did netually transport the ordinary load of passengers and freight which compose the cargoes of those ferry boats, and was held out as ready to transport on such a thoroughlare all passengers and freight that might offer, is sufficient to shift the burden of proof. and, in the absence of any evidence from the claimants of the vessel, will warrant the inference that the vessel was being used as an instrument for interstate commerce, as defined by the Supreme Court in the case of the Daniel Bail. She was therefore subject to the laws of Congress, and must be held liable for the omission of the proper inspection

United States.

The United States vs. The Steamboat Sunswick &c.—In this case the only point presented for my consideration has been disposed of, so far as this Court is concerned, by my decision in the previous case against the same vessel, and a similar result must follow here. Let a decree be entered for the

COURT OF SESSIONS

The Penalty of Keeping an All Night Music and Dance Garden.
Before Judge Moore and Associate Justice Voorhees

and Johnson. On Wednesday last August Mispagel was convicted of keeping a disorderly house, the "Pavillon" lager beer and dance garden, on Court street, near Congress. There are very frequently dances at the "Pavillon" which are kept up until three or four o'clock in the morning, greatly to the annoyance of the nelghbors, who complained of the place as a nulsance. Judge Moore yesterday fined Mispagel $50, and warned him that if he were convicted of the same offence again he could be sentenced to the Penitentiary for a year. Judge Moore informed him that this prosecution had not been instituted to imprison him, but merely to show him that the way in which he had been conducting his place was not according to law. While he had a perfect right to keep the place he had no right to keep it in such a way that it was an annoyance to the neighborhood. vilion" lager beer and dance garden, on Court name as O. M. Barnard, opened an account at the Franklin Savings Bank, and deposited at various times three certified checks on various banks of this city, amounting in the aggregate to $5,000. On this deposit, it is alleged, he drew at different times the sum of $3,400, leaving a balance to his credit of $1,600. The Franklin Bank deposited the checks with the West Side Bank, who sent them to the Clearing House, when they were discovered to have been raised from small checks, amounting in the aggregate to some $75. The checks were returned to the West Side Bank, with the above information, and by them to the Franklin. A description of Barnard being given to Detective McConneil, of the Twenteth precinct, he kept a sharp look out for him, and was rewarded yesterday morning by seeing him passing through Thirty-ninth street, between Eighth and Ninth avenues, and took him in custody. On the way to the station house the prisoner broke from the officer and attempted to make his escape, but was recaptured. He was conveyed before Justice Ledwith, at Jefferson Market, yesterday afternoon, and denied the charge, but was held for examination. to his credit of $1,000. The Franklin Bank deposited
